Network She is Three

The networking organisation Network She celebrated its third birthday during September with a number of networking events across the area including a birthday party at the Crowne Plaza in Chester and a joint event as part of 'Anglesey Business Week', along side Network She members, were Vona Law of WINSENT, social entrepreneurship and Jo Quinney of Q Marketing & PR Ltd, representing Business on Anglesey.

Network She is designed to meet the needs of women in business and those aspiring to go into business in North Wales and the North West.

"When I went into business I had never experienced networking and when I did it was all happening at 7am and full of 'suits and ties'. It just didn't work for me and I knew it wouldn't work for a large number of business women whose personal responsibilities on top of their workload made it impossible to get involved. It became obvious that women needed a group to open doors that gave them the flexibility to be involved when circumstances would allow and was a mix of social and business," says Ruth Lloyd-Williams founding Director of Network She.

The annual Network She Awards are open for nominations until 15th October with the prestigious awards ceremony taking place on 19th November at The Crowne Plaza Hotel, Chester. "We are celebrating business women who continue to succeed in difficult and unpredictable time, Network She is here to encourage, promote and support," said Ruth.

Ruth is facing the challenge of expanding the group into the South of England and Yorkshire. The bi-annual magazine will soon have a northern and southern edition. "Network She is relevant to the UK as a whole, I am proud that we began in North Wales and we will soon become a UK wide group we have come a long way in three years," says Ruth.
